The home was graced with baskets of gladioli, mums and dahlias for the occasion.

The bride, given in marriage by her Father was radiant in a gown of white satin topped by softly draped chantilly lace. The moulded bodice featured a rounded neckline and long lily point sleeves, while the bouffant skirt swept to a long train. Miss Marjorie Hirsche, was her sisters only attendant. She wore a gown of mauve lace with matching bolero and carried a bouquet of yellow carnations.

Dillon Erickson, brother of the groom acted as best man.

Nemiscam Notes

Misses Olga and Marie Wek of Linwood, California have been house guests of Mr and Mrs K. Huisman.

Mr Russel Dixon has had the misfortune to lose three young calves lately.

There was a poor attendance at the Thistle Ridge Church last Sunday. The day was a perfect combing day and the men were busy trying to get the grain cut. The combines have been laid up a good bit with rain.

Hoping has lost one of it's teachers. He was from New Brunswick and was so homesick he thought he was going to have a nervous breakdown.

Nemiscan is growing. Mr and Mrs David Hill have moved into town. Mr Hill is working on the elevator.

One of my hens sneaked away and brought out four chickens. I was thinking how nice it would have been if she had set another week and brought out turkeys, what with Xmas just around the second corner. If they set three weeks they bring out chickens, you know, but they have to set four weeks for turkeys.

Mr Barry Hagen has returned to his home in Kimberley.

Mr and Mrs Ben Harty are the proud parents of a new baby boy. Congratulations to Benny and Margaret.

Mr and Mrs Henry Mueller are busy building themselves a trailer so they can travel in comfort.

Miss Fey Baldwin of Calgary is home with her parents, Mr and Mrs Ken Baldwin, for a weeks holiday.

Tame Geese Shot By Fearless Hunters

Hunting wild ducks and geese is a sport enjoyed by thousands and is truly a sport but when hunters stoop so low as to shoot the big, ambling tame grey geese found on farms it is almost a new low for even the poorest of sportsmen.

Recently there were 22 of these grey geese on the Jess Atwood farm north of town but now there is none. No poor sportsmen didn't get them all—just part of them.

By driving the geese north of the house the big brave "hunter" must have felt secure to do their dirty work but were surprised and frightened off by the arrival of a neighbor, having shot only eight of the birds and making off with only three, leaving two dead ones and three mortally wounded. The rest of the flock was well marked with buck-shot.

To prevent any further acts of such "sportsmanship," Jess now has the remainder of the birds in cold storage.

Events like this are the main reasons farmers post their lands with "No Trespassing" signs. If all hunters would exercise the same care on a farmers land he would expect if he were the owner lots more places would be open to hunters.

The Friday Nite Club met recently at the home of Mrs Irene Bowden with Mrs Geneva Larson in charge of the delicious lunch. This was the Club's annual Fall Party and contest games, hat making competitions and other laughter-creating games being played.

His friends in the district are sorry to learn that the home of Mr and Mrs Fritz Komm near Woolford was struck by lightning about eight o'clock Wednesday morning causing about $2,500 damage.

Curt West who has been employed at the Auxiliary Mental Hospital for the past seventeen years, recently reached the age of retirement and is now enjoying the time spent with his family and working on the small farm which they have just out of town. Mr West's position as Engineer or Fireman is being filled by Brownie Witbeck.

Mr and Mrs Evan Sabey have received word that their son Don who is completing his last year of University at Salt Lake, was chosen to represent the National Legal Fraternity of which he is a member, at their convention in Des Moines, Iowa.

Karen McLean and Heber Jones Wed In Cardston Temple

The marriage of Karen McLean, daughter of Mr and Mrs Joe McLean, to Heber Jones, son of Albert Jones and the late Rose Jones, was solemnized in the Alberts Temple last week with President Smith officiating at the double ring ceremony.

A gown of white satin with a lace overskirt, lovely in its simplicity, was chosen by the bride who carried a bouquet of white baby mums centered by red roses. A lustrous string of pearls accented the round neckline of the gown, and a fingertip veil edged with lace misted from a crown of nylon net studded with pearls.

The bride's attendants were Sandra Kirkham, June Woodhead, Shirley McLean and Barbara Christensen Nalder who wore ballerina length gowns of pastel shaded gladioli, while the best man was John Holmes with Jim Tillack, Bill Fairbanks, and Gordon Bowden also in the receiving line.

A beige frock complimented by a corsage of red dahlias was worn by Mrs McLean for the occasion.

Mr and Mrs Joe Kirkham and Mr and Mrs Jerry Bartosek greeted the guests in the foyer as they arrived to extend their congratulations to the newlyweds, while Geraldine Tillack was in charge of the Guest Book. The Gift Table was arranged by Louise Bowden, Barbara and Mary Rodeback, and as the guests passed the receiving line they were directed to the Buffet Table by Mr and Mrs Elmo Christensen, as dinner music was played by Emma Dahl.

The bridal party stood in front of a background of streamers in which were blended the fall colors, with a profusion of gladioli and other fall flowers carrying the theme throughout, including the bride's table which held the beautifully decorated cake and Cambridge Arms with yellow tapers.

The interesting program was emceed by Bill Nalder and included the following numbers: "Homework" was sung by Gen. Laura and Jeanine, followed by "O Promise Me" rendered by the bride's father, after which Larry Dahl played "Wonderful One" on his sax. After Hazel Holmes piano solo Betty Evans entertained with a Reading followed by "Through The Years" by Jeanine Jensen. The tribute to the bride was proposed by Bishop Dahl with the groom responding.

Before leaving on their honeymoon trip to Spokane and points in B.C. Mrs Jones donned a tan wool suit with matching accessories and a corsage of red roses.

The Raymond Music Club members and their husbands had a gay evening around a bonfire out at the Fairgrounds last week when winners were sizzled and sand used liberally on the buns for just about the last welner roast of the season.

When all had eaten their fill Marie Matkin led the group in Community Singing, Doris Court gave a humorous reading, Helen Sabey read a Gazette, and Nellie Duncombe, Maybelle Anderson, Lavern Anderson, Emma Dahl, and Marie Strong participated in original skits.

Sunday evening Mr and Mrs Deb Thompson motored to Coult's where they were the guests of Mr and Mrs Gerry Witbeck.

Mayor and Mrs Frank Taylor are pleased to have visiting with them for a week their daughter Marolyn who has been working in San Francisco during the summer. She will return to her studies at the BYU after her visit here.

A long holiday week-end to many a family means taking the car out to the nearest turn-pike — darting into the first empty space to come along and staying there for a furious six-hour drive to a resort. After a hopelessly brief stay the whole process is repeated in reverse. Later as they wearily maneuver into their driveway they wonder why the neighbor next door chuckles from the deep recess of his hammock.

FARM BOY AND CORN

He walked from the barn down to the field,
 And saw the tall corn, thankful for the sun.
 And as he stood there thinking of the yield,
 And of the harvesting not yet begun,
 The movement of the tassels caught his eye,
 And he saw sudden beauty in their dance.
 Then he saw the mountains and the sky,
 Not, as before, with quick unloving glance,
 Perhaps, to check for signs of coming rain—
 He saw the blue sky meeting purple haze
 And blending with the distant mountain chain,
 And there was understanding in his gaze.

NIGHTMARE AND REALITY

By Tony Grabo

JIM waited tensely, he was huddled in a corner of the small room. His eyes were large, and now, filled with fearful excitement. His nerves were taut, and he scarcely dared to breathe. Through the frame of the open window, the moon cast a pale, oblique patch of light onto the center of the floor. The ethereal luminescence made everything seem illusive; distorted.

Opposite him—on the other side of the patch of light—crouched a tiger! He was on his haunches, staring at him with unblinking, yellow-green eyes. The stripes on his body were jet-black with a velvety sheen to them, which contrasted sharply against the yellowish background of his coat.

His tail formed a half-loop behind him, while he crouched with his little body almost touching the floor. His shoulders were hunched and paws that were large, and thickly padded, were drawn up under him in a position ready to spring! His stance didn't change; he lurked there with eyes that reflected an iridescent light; staring—unblinking.

And there, just a few feet from him—stood a lion! Not preparing to do battle with the tiger, but staring—staring at him! Two savage animals—hereditary enemies—were now unmindful of each other, glaring at their common enemy—man.

The lion's tawny frame was planted solidly on stocky legs. The tufted fetlocks grew in profusion and almost covered his huge paws. His massive head was held high, allowing the darker mane to flow freely from it. He was the lord; undisputed king of the jungle! Fearless of man or beast!

His limpid eyes scarcely veiled the ferocity contained within him. The tip of his tail lay on the floor with the mane at the end seemingly unattached, resembling an outgrowth of vegetation. He stood there, eyes glowing luminously; foreboding, not moving.

Jim glanced briefly out the rectangular square of light. Now, the night sounds began to creep into the room. All the little noises associated with night were grossly exaggerated. The wind stirred the leaves gently as it passed through the trees; the clouds made patterns against the moon, and the chirping and crickets of small insects filled the square of the window and ricocheted around from wall to wall.

He wished he had obeyed his mother and stayed in bed like she told him to. Maybe this never would have happened. Everything was out of control now, it had gone too far.

What was that? A noise—by the door. Slowly—ever so slowly, it began to open. The silver of light from the other room gradually expanded until it silhouetted someone standing there.

"Danny!" Gladness blotted out fantasy as he recognized his mother's voice and rushed into her arms, unmindful of the scolding he would get.

"How many times must I tell you not to play with those stuffed animals after you're put to bed? You know they'll cause you to have nightmares if you play with them in the dark!"

A MOTHER REMEMBERS

In Looking-Glass Land, as a serious child, Long I travelled with Alice the chess-board scene,

Where my concept of fine conversation was styled,

And I was taught manners by the Red Queen.

O the shrewd Red Queen—with her taut tart tongue

Could scold me, and prod me, in words bright as brass, Could give me short shrift in a comment that stung,

And mock me in front of the Looking-Glass.

"Speak when you're spoken to" "Open your mouth!"

"Don't twiddle your fingers!" "Remember who you are!"

"Take the consequences—and always speak truth—"

And you'll be a Queen when you reach the Eighth Square."

Now I am a Queen of a sort, somewhat bolder,

Prone to give orders, correct, and command,

And the Red Queen benignly looks over my shoulder

At my small extension of Looking-Glass Land.
